

Abstract of Disclosure

An LED printing system includes a data source, a printer controller and an LED printer head. The data source is used to provide original data. The printer controller is used to process the original data. The LED printer head is used to print the processed data without further processing them.